Westover Villas … 9 and 10

The structure of villas 9 and 10 seems to be quite different from any of the others.
According to the maps of the period, 9 and 10 are a semi-detached pair. There also seems to be some sort of direct connection to number 11 – at least by the 1890s.

Unlike the other villas, which seem to have their 'belvederes' located in small Italianate towers, it seems that the belvedere for no. 9 is the 3rd storey 'shed like' structure we see in these pictures. (There are no Italianate towers included in the structure of no.9). Looks like a rather more spacious belvedere than those located in the towers of the other villas?

The photo with the 3 chaps and the hand-cart shows part of the front aspect of no. 10. Sadly rather too 'cropped' to allow much useful information to be derived from the image.
It does show a small part of what seems to be the recessed part of no. 9, on the extreme left of the photo.
More images of this pair would be most helpful in trying to decipher exactly what is happening here...
